THE CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA. GA. TUESDAY, MARCH 16, 1926.

The classification tax proposal almost passed at the regular session in the summer of 1925, differences between the two houses preventing enactment of the law during the closing minutes of the last day of the session. Neither house did much business at the Monday session, the cold weather inducing early adjournment, coupled with the knowledge that an amendment of the law during the county, introduced a pension bill which would materially change the house of the $22,000,000 educational bond bill, debate on which had been carried over from Thursday.

One amendments were offered in the house to the $22,000,000 educational bond bill, debate on which had been carried over from Thursday.

One amendments, by Representative Stark, of Whitfield, would eliminate all reference to allocation of funds. The bill as recommended from committee divides the money into $4,000-1000 for prompt payment of teachers, $7,000,000 for alm in the strick of the start which had been carried or for the summer. Countess Cathcart Scores "ASHES OF LOVE" TIRESOME AND ARTLESS Barren Zero as Actress

BY JAS. O'CONNELL BENNETT.

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, March 15.—Countess
Vera Catheart, late of Ellis Island and South Africa, came forth tonight for the first time anywhere as actress and dramatist, and as both she registered a large and barren zero. Her play was "Ashes of Love," and her role was herself. An audience that pretty well filled the Belasco theater was patient and not unpitying. The oldsters in it. like Speaker Longworth, Congressman Sol Bloom and the writer of this obituary, who could remember the moral exhibitions of the Cherry sixters, agreed at 11 o'clock that they had, in a manner of speaking, renewed their youth.

The countess as actress is amazing.

Before the first act began-there Before the first act began—there were three and they were 'pizen long—an abashed English actor came before the curtain and with courtly preliminaries said: "This play is unique in that all the persons in it are living, and in that the author is playing seenes from her own life, and, third, in that the dialogue is composed of things which the Countess Catheart herself has said and heard and jotted down."

down."

Then the curtain rose and the countess, now known as Lady Isabelle Rayhaven, showed herself restless and anhappy at a party in London, because, as she told her husband, Lord Douglas Rayhaven, she could no longer bear "this coldness, this imprisonment." He told her those were not matters usually discussed by husband and wife at parties, an admonition she took very ill, and forthwith ran away to South Africa, with a frightly took very ill, and forthwith ran away to South Africa with a frightful bounder, one Lord Victor Anton. who drank too much and was to drink more before 11 o'clock.

If Lady Vera wishes—and her ballyhoo who spoke before the curtain intimated that she did—the world to accept Victor as a portrait of her former paramour, Lord Craven, then indeed has she taken a dreadful vengeance on Craven. For Victor maltreats and deserts Lady Estelle, seduces her best friend, and finally throws a brandy bottle at her, besides allowing her to do the heavy housework in South Africa.

White Radio Bill To Protect Fan Passed by House

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.
Washington, March 15.—Legislation designed to protect the long-suffering radio fan has been passed by the house and now goes to the senate.

The White bill, which was passed Monday by a vote of 218 to 124, seeks to regulate radio so that every fan who listens in will have the best service possible and be protected against the evils which have cropped up in the development of this new art.

The secretary of commerce, who now regulates radio, would have under this measure a commission of five measure.

The secretary of commerce, who now regulates radio, would have under this measure a commission of five men, representing five geographical divisions of the country, to aid him and to protect further the public interest.

The bill contains provisions to protect the public against these evils:

One—Monopoly of radio apparatus, which might bring extortionate prices for sets and parts of sets.

Two—Radio "pests," such as have interfered in the past with legitimate broadcasting, or have transmitted false distress signals.

Three—Inefficient broadcasters.

The bill also requires that in broadcasting paid matter, intended for indirect advertising, an announcement must be made to this effect and the name of the concern paying for the service must be given to prevent advertising without the label.

One interesting question was raised before final action on the bill in the house by an amendment of Representative Blanton, Texas democrat, which would make the laws of libel and slander applicable to radio speeches. This amendment was defeated. This action was taken only a few hours after announcement of the first suit for libel over radio, which will be brought by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, of Illinois, who sat by the fire at his home with his wife the other night and heard over the radio that he was at a night club enjoying the festivities.

It is presumed that the ordinary laws against slander and libel apply to radio, but the question has never been presented to the courts. Blanton wanted to make it certain by a provision in the bill.

T. G. ROQUEMORE HURT WHEN HIT BY TRUCK

T. G. Roquemore, of 225 Fulton street, East Point, was carried to the Atlanta hospital Monday afternoon suffering from minor bruises as the result of being struck by a truck driven by Albert Brackett, an employee of the Bell Plumbing company, of East Point, according to police. The accident occurred in front of the Georgia Railway and Power company service station as Roquemore alighted from a street car, it was stated.

The injured man was taken to the hospital in the private embulance of A. C. Hemperley.

Motorman W. T. Archer was in charge of the street car when the accident occurred.

BY MRS. THOMPSON

The petition of Mrs. Mattie Thomas Thompson, of Eufaula, Ala., for a new trial in her suit against the Famous-Players-Lasky company was de-nied Monday by Judge Samuel H. Sibley, in federal court. Mrs. Thompson contended that she was the author of the scenario, on which the motion picture, "The Ten Commandments," was based. She sought an injunction this picture until her rights as author were established.

When the case was first heard several months ago, Judge Sibley decided in favor of the company. The pro-ducers contended the scenario was written by Miss June McPherson, and eral months ago, Judge Sibley decided in favor of the company. The producers contended the scenario was written by Miss June McPherson, and a petition for a new trial was filed on the ground that additional evidence was discovered. Arguments were heard Saturday. The proposal met no opposition.

FEDERAL INCOME TAXPAYERS RUSH TO MAKE RETURNS

Hundreds of business men of Atlan ta visited the office of the collector of internal revenue Monday to make income tax returns for 1925 before the legal time limit expired at midnight; legal time limit expired at midnight. Although many persons were served during the day no person was kept waiting for any unreasonable length of time as a large force of extra clerks was busy handling the blanks. Josiah T. Rose, the revenu-collector, was pleased with the situation and declared the people responded quickly to his call that they pay their taxes before penalties were due to be imposed.

PEACHES?

Georgia, of Course!

Virginia hams, Vermont maple syrup, Florida oranges, Long Island ducks - hats off to all of them!

But what delicacy is so widely and justly heralded as Georgia peaches?

A wonderful crop, from a wonderful state-with a broader and brighter future before it as long as the human race enjoys good things to eat.

Of course, orchards have to be sprayed and fertilized and the harvest gathered, graded, packed and shipped. All that requires money and credit.

And so, just as in every other Georgia industry, The Citizens and Southern Bank co-operates at every stage in bringing back peach profits to the grower and prosperity to Georgia.

"A Greater Emory for a Greater Atlanta"

A total of $2,500,000 a year---four hundred per cent dividends---is what Emory University is now bringing to Atlanta in return for the $500,000 pledged by this city in 1916 to bring the University here. But these tremendous financial returns are small in comparison to the other benefits which this great institution confers upon Atlanta.

Take, for instance, the Medical Divisions of the University. The Emory Branch of Grady Hospital last year cared for 40,800 free patients in the out-patient department, and handled 3,700 cases in the charity wards. From the Emory Medical School came all the internes but two in Atlanta's hospitals. Despite its lack of endowment, the Wesley Memorial Hospital at Emory averaged 200 charity cases a month in its out-patient department, and treated a total of 252 free or part-pay bed patients for the year. Eighty per cent of Atlanta's physicians and surgeons were trained at Emory.

Every other one of Emory's eleven schools and divisions renders proportionate service. The College of Liberal Arts and the School of Business Administration are furnishing trained man-power for all of our great business and industrial enterprises. The students of the Law School give valuable assistance to the Legal Aid Society in handling cases for the poor. Every Sunday professors and students from the Theological School fill from ten to fifteen church pulpits in this territory, and the 200 members of the University faculty as a whole average 15,000 hours a year of lectures and other free services to various Atlanta organizations. The Graduate School is training instructors for colleges all over the South. The Summer School and Extension Division are giving instruction to 500 of the 1,200 white teachers of Atlanta's public schools.

Consider, too, what has happened between Atlanta and Emory. Increased property values, hundreds of new homes, and thousands of new residents are due directly or indirectly to the University's location here. Take a look at the Emory men about you. Atlanta now has 1,000 Emory alumni, leaders in every industry, business and profession. And the Atlanta territory, last year, had 739 students in training at Emory. If these young men and women had to go elsewhere for a college education, they would take away from Atlanta more than $500,000 a year.

Surely, no more facts are necessary to show "A Greater Emory Means a Greater Atlanta," in every way---from a standpoint of health, of wealth, of education, of culture, and of morality.

Just as Atlanta will progress if Emory expands, so Atlanta will suffer if Emory has to curtail its growth. And the University to-day faces retrenchment. The Medical School is turning away more students than it can admit, at a time when the doctors of Georgia are dying faster than the two medical schools in this state are graduating students to take their places. Every department at Emory has reached a limit in size and efficiency until additional buildings and endowment are provided. Even the present student body of 2,000 must be reduced unless relief is given.

It is to meet these critical needs that the University has launched a $10,000,000 Expansion Program.

Atlanta Is Asked to Give Only $750,000

In this $10,000,000 undertaking, which will treble Emory University's financial and cultural value to Atlanta, Atlanta-at-large is asked to give only $750,000.

'Atlanta could well afford to invest many times $750,000 in a movement which will pay 400 per cent dividends, which will mean an $18,000,000 University for this city by 1936, and which will assure the continued leadership of Atlanta as the center of higher education in the South.

The success of the whole program hinges largely on the response in Atlanta, and the comparative smallness of our $750,-000 quota makes it doubly important that we complete this campaign by March 20, which has been set as the closing date.

The response of the public-spirited citizens interviewed so far has been splendid. The danger lies in the fact that, with the present force of workers, it may be impossible for us in the remaining five days of the campaign to approach every one who should have a share in this great enterprise.

The Committee is giving you this information in advance that you may be ready to make your subscription when a worker calls.

If you prefer, make your subscription on this form and mail it to us TODAY. It will help greatly.

LANG AND HALEY HEAD ENJOYABLE BILL AT FORSYTH

Harry Lang and Bernice Haley took highest honors Monday night at Keith's Forsyth theater with an uproariously funny sketch, entitlde "Who Is Your Boss." Miss Haley's imitation of a stubbornly inquisitive girl, with Lang on the losing side of the argument, kept the audience constantly in the throes of laughter.

Hathaway and company offered a series of interesting radio experiments and a novel illusion with "The Cabinet of Death." Ruth, the mystery girl, is locked in a cabinet in which a score or more of long swords are driven. Yet, when the swords are removed she appears none the worse for her brief sojourn in the necessarily limited space between the blades.

Marshall hung his head when his wife's name was mentioned in the reading of the confession. When that part of his statement was read where he said Miss Dietrich demanded money he looked up with fire in his eyes.

The confession, the third and last version he gave of the cause of the death of the 35-year-old milliner, was admitted into the record after Abraham Wernick, Marshall's counsel, offered objection and was granted an there had been "no force or coercion" used.

On January 19, the night Miss Dietrich died, Marshall said she telephoned she was coming to his office, and he told her she "better go on home."

He tried to avoid her, he said, but he met her on the street. They returned to the office and he gave her "an adjustment," she having been given treatments by Marshall from time to time.

Marshall said she told him about having bought wearing appared amounting to more than $100.

"She wanted me to give her money to pay for those things," Marshall said. "I refused. Then a quarrel started."

The tardiness of receipts, which are expected to total almost $400,000,000 for this quarter, was attributed to the ruling permitting persons and corporations with incomes over $5,000 to file tentative returns now and final returns within 60 days.

This ruling however, required payment of one-fourth of the estimated tax at this time, and it will be several days, Under-Secretary Winston estimated, before final figures will be available on the amount of collections for this quarter.

Chicago, March 15. — (A)—Tyrus Cobb, beginning his 21st season with Detroit, donned his uniform long enough today for the cameraman to catch him swinging at a few balls at the Tygers' Augusta training camp. He did not remove the smoked glasses acquired in Baltimore, but managed to put one in the bleachers before calling it a day. His work in the box and at first base so favorably impressed the management of the Boston Americans that they paid a fancy figure for him.

In 1921 Billy Smith went to Shreveport as manager and it was not long before he engineered a deal that brought Eibel again into his fold. In the Texas league, Hack broke all home run records up to that time, getting 35 for 1921, and 27 in two-thirds of the 1922 season when he broke a finger and was forced to quit the game just when he was going his best.

Eibel knows full well the value of being in fine physical condition, and right at present is not far from his Texas league form.

Both have kept in the best of shape by recent bouts. The colorful Panama battler, who has looked so well in previous engagements in this country, won by the knockout route over Butch Carr in a fracas at Tampa last Friday. Mace has served in the Stribling camp in Miami for the past month, and has gradually rounded into the best of shape for tonight's affair. Solomon probably will have a slight advantage in weight, but it will hardly be enough to make any difference. He is expected to weigh in at about 190, while Mace will tip the scales at 187.

While both looked good in their dress rehearsals Monday, Solomon is expected to rule a slight favorite when they crawl through the ropes tonight.

CELIA ANTICIPATES AN ORDEAL.

It was the evening of Hilary's arrival. His boat had come in at two o'clock that afternoon, but was held five hours in quarantine because of a supposed case of scarlet fever. He had wired that he would probably be at home in time for dinner.

Celia consulted the housekeeper and ordered for dinner his favorite dishes. She had heard with the rest of the world that the best way to put men in a good humor is to give them what they like to eat. Hilary was, of course, different from other men in numerous ways, but she had noticed that he enjoyed eating what he liked, and she wished very much that he should be in a good humor that evening. She had also told Donovan to lay out his favorite gown for her, the antique brocade with little silver castles scattered over it.

Now as she sat at her dressing-table, while Donovan arranged her hair for the net of emeralds, she glanced at her ex-nurse's face in the mirror, and saw that it had what she used to call its "just" look. This look had meant, when Celia was a child, that Donovan held a strong and unfavorable opinion of her conduct, but did not choose to express it since "the Hedges woman" had been put before her as a judge of Celia's

The thought of telling Hilary about her adventure at the Sieburg, now that he was in America and would shortly be in the house, made her feel quite different from the way she had felt about it when she was

She glanced again at the grim countneance in the mirror and wished that Donovan were a little more motherly in type. She did not herself know just what she meant by motherly; it was certainly not the thought of her own mother that prompted her. The strongest memory that Celia had of poor Lucile Gibbs was the way she had always smelt of liniment, which she used for her poor back, and the scent of White Rose, with which she tried to disguise the liniment. This combined smell, and the way Lucille used to cry over her, after her father had been unusually brutal to her—for her mother had never dared enter the studio while he was baiting Celia—these two things were the chief impressions of motherhood that remained with her. She had hated the hot, useless tears which tickled her face and dropped among the roots of her hair. She had once scandalized Donovan by asking her if The Mother of God smelt of anything. She recalled this question now and her nurse's

'If the Blessed Virgin smells of anything, 'tis the odor of sanctity -and don't you ever dare ask me such a blaspemous question again,

Poor Celia couldn't understand Donovan's wrath at the time. She would have preferred to hear that Our Lady had no perfume of any sort, and had hoped to be told so. Now she could have smiled at the memory but for that set face in the glass and the tight feeling about

Would he be angry? Would he perhaps be so angry that he would say: "Since you have found this peculiar way of life both remunerative and to your taste, you might as well continue it." Her unconscious reproduction of Hilary's language, when really angry, showed how closely she had observed him.

Her heart sank lower and lower, and grew tighter and tighter, just as though it were a ball being wound very close and hard by the mechanism of it sown beating.

"Nurse..." she said suddenly, glancing again at the reflection of Donovan's face—she only called her nurse in softer moments and when they were alone—"Nurse . . . I am going to tell Mr. Fraser all about the Sieburg theater, this evening."

If that grim face would soften but ever so little. It didn't exactly soften, but the shell of hardness cracked slightly, as when one stirs the surface of ice by flinging a stone.
"I'm glad to hear it, Miss," said she, "and obliged to you for taking the trouble to tell me."

She couldn't accustom herself to calling Celia "Ma'am" or "Madam," and after one or two fruitless efforts had calmly given it up.

Celia, more haughty now, said:
"I didn't choose you to think that I would conceal anything from Mr. Fraser. I never do and never shall."

Donovan, unmoved by this change of tone, replied firmly:

"I hope you'll stick to that, miss."
Celia was far more annoyed with herself for having been so weak as to crave a sign of sympathy, than she was with Donovan for with-holding it. She rose, fortified by the rebuff against herself, her nurse, the whole world, and stood in cold silence while her gown was being

"My scarf, please," she then said, in much the tone a French aristocrat on her way to the guillotine might have used to one of the canaille who was assisting her to dress for the occasion.

Donovan brought the long scarf of silk and laid it over her shoulders. As she did so, she said, using on her part, a voice in which the citoyenne might have remarked that the knife was sharp and fell quickly: "The sooner it's over the better you'll feel, miss."

"That will do," said Celia, moving toward the door. But a knotty hand on her shoulder detained and held her, as when she had been about to turn away in a cold rage when a child.

"No, miss, it won't do at all," returned Donovan. "You didn't call me 'nurse' for nothing just now. I know them frozen tempers of yours. I ain't a mushy nature any more than you are, and I don't warm easy.

Maybe you'll come back less happy than you went down." There was a pause. Then-"Thank you . . . nurse," said Celia, not looking at her. The hard fingers pinched her shoulder slightly in response, then released it.

Celia went downstairs. In the library a log fire was burning and the whole room fragrant with the mingled scent of Russian leather and potted giroflees—the flowers that Hilary liked best. She had gone her-self in the car that afternoon and brought back with her these growing plants. She touched one of the velvety petals as she stood by his writing-table looking down at it. How pretty the old English name for them was—yellow violets . . . but they smelt even sweeter than violets, she thought—there was something aromatic in their perfume. She went about the room to see that all was in order, and stopped at last before the carved chair in which she usually sat. She had been very proud to learn that she was the only woman he had ever admitted here. Perhaps after this evening—after she had told him—he wouldn't wish her to come any more... "If only he could have been my real father," she thought, and her heart tightened still more and sank lower.

Then she started. She hadn't thought he would come before eight, and it was only seven, but she had heard the front door being unbarred. That was Hilary's voice speaking to Jenkins. Her heart began to beat with hard little digs as though it were pointed. with hard little digs as though it were pointed. Maybe he would go up first to dress. Maybe she could put off telling him until after dinner. ... She had ordered dinner for half-past eight. No, she would rather get it over at once... if he came to the library before going upstairs.

Just here Hilary came in looking like a bear, for he had kept on his big fur traveling coat. It was still sprinkled with snow, in spite of Jenkins' brushings. Celia went forward to meet him, but with a deprecatory smile. He held out a warning hand:

"My dear child, don't come too near me! I've caught the most devilish cold on those beastly docks."

devilish cold on those beastly docks."

Then as she stopped short:

"How nice of you to put on my pet frock! And how more than nice to see you again. I hope you missed me half as much as I've

"I've missed you very much," said Celia.

Jenkins now entered with a glass of smoking Scotch.

"That's all, thank you," said Hilary, taking the glass of Scotch from the tray. "No—wait a moment." He turned to Celia. "If you'll put up with me, I think I'll send word to Haslipp to lay out my smoking WINNER things and a thick dressing gown for dinner. I'm ripply with shivers as a flag in the breeze."

Celia smiled even more faintly than usual.
"I never noticed what you have on," she said.

Jenkins went off to take the order, and Hilary laughed then sneezed "Damn!" he exclaimed, as the hot drink splashed on his hand, but laughed again while he sopped it up, looking at her with quizzical affec-(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution.)

Methodist Ministers Differ With Wellborn On Volstead Question

treatment above. Do not think any green soap or represented as of palm and olive oils, is the same as Palmolive.

Be sure you get the real Palmolive

Remember that before Palmolive came, women were told, "use no soap on your faces." Soaps then were judged too harsh. Palmolive is a beauty soap made for one purpose only; to safeguard your complexion. 60 years of soap study stand behind it. Millions of pretty skins prove its gentle safety beyond all doubt.

And it costs but 10c the cake.—so little that millions let it do for their bodies what it does for their faces.

Stating they differed with M. B. Wellborn, district governor of the Federal Reserve bank, in regard to alleged violations of the Volstead act ministers passed resolutions question Monday morning at a session at Wesley Memorial church. The ministers "regretted" the fact the chamber of commerce had not seen tit to respond to certain requests on prohibition results asked by Congressman W. D. Upshaw last week. It was their opinion his questions regarding recent agitation in congress on prohibition in Atlanta "should be a seen an accomplete the prohibition of the prohibition results asked by Congressman W. D. Upshaw last week. It was their opinion his questions are prohibition results asked by Congressman W. D. Upshaw last week. It was their opinion his questions as a prohibition results asked by Congressman W. D. Upshaw last week. It was their opinion his questions and vicing the opinion he had misjudged local conditions, Atlanta Methodist ministers passed resolutions all evicing the opinion he had misjudged local conditions of the Volstead act alleged violations of the V were of nationwide importance."

Rev. John Twiggs, pastor of St.
John's Methodist church, was named chairman of a committee to further consider the question. Rev. W. W.
Carroll, pastor of Oakland City Methodist, outlined the progress of Methodists of Atlanta in church work.

SEEK INDICTMENTS TODAY IN MUTINY

The Fulton county grand jury, at its session today, will be asked to return indictments charging murder, turn indictments charging murder, robbery and escape against R. L. Travis, Dave Perkins and Raymond Sisson, three convicts who last Tuesday staged a mutiny which resulted in the fatal shooting of Captain Pat P. Newsome, guard, and serious injury of three convicts.

In the event true bills are returned, Assistant Solicitor Ed Stephens stated that a speedy trial would be arranged and the extreme penalty of the law asked.

COUNCILMAN DOWDY

Vigilance of turnkeys barely prevented the escape Monday of fifteen negro prisoners who had been confined in the negro sction of the city police barracks.

Bricks were discovered to have been removed from the bottom of the cell wall and a hole had been dug which, within a short time, would have been large enough to permit the prisoners to crawl to liberty.

Councilman M. F. Dowdy, of the sixth ward, Monday stalked into council and challenged the "whole works" with the grin of a proud father. He continued to beam in a condescending manner on other members of the body and at last the secret was out.

Mr. Dowdy reported that he is the father of Miss Gladys Esther Dowdy, who arrived early Sunday morning.

secretary of the navy in President Coolidge's cabinet, sees an augury of the further development of the American nation along the ideals laid down by the founders of the republic.

This contest, in which the seven national winners will be given free tours of Europe this summer, is perhaps of greatest importance in that it induces a careful study of the fundamentals of American government on the part of all the tens of thousands of contestants. The subjects for the original orations all deal with the national constitution, and the men who helped formulate its tenets, and in every high school in the land, boys and girls, eager to win the seven big prizes, are today studying the history of their own government as tory of their own government as never before.

In Georgia the district contests between school champions will be held in April and, on May 7, the 12 district winners will meet at Atlanta to decide the state championship. The Constitution is giving prizes of $15 to each of the district winners and $100 and $20 to winners of first and second place in the state contest.

The winner of first prize in the state contest will go to Kansas City for the finals for this zone, there to compete with other state winners in this section for one of the European trip prizes.

For the Heavier Diet of Opera Comes Sigrid Onegin, Singer

By Beverly Burgess.

In the college world of America there are many Greek letter fraternities, each occupying its own place of importance and achievements.

There is one which is particularly outstanding, however, because of its national affiliations and accomplishments in the field of journalism—the Pi Delta Epsilon.

This is an honorary fraternity of journalism, but, not as the title might lead you to think, is not alone honorary, to the extent that it is not alone honorary, to the extent that it is not alone amount of the chapters are most interesting and delighful gatherings had in conventions. This year the convention will be held in Berkelley Call, and the delegates will have this splendid trip all through the Royal Gorge, Salt Lake City, going through the Garden of the Gods.

But there is some more to tell!

The Lucy Cobb girls certainly are not "short sports," for they entertained our girls out at the college for the whole time of their Athens stay and furthermore, after the game gave the seminary girls a lovely dance. At this dance the Lucy Cobb girls dressed as boys and were the escorts and beaux of the Atlanta belles and beauties.

Not only was it a man-less dance but the multitude of Georgia boys who came uninvited were only allowed to The Atlanta friends of little Miss Peggy Jappa will be glad to know that she is improving at her home in Ensley, Ala., after a serious illness with influenza. came uninvited were only allowed to peep in at the doors and windows but not admitted.

That's difficult for the boys to ap-preciate I am sure.

monthly cooperative hog sale for Thomas county, the price received being $11.15 on a basis of No. 1's. The sale was in charge of W. W. Webb, of the state bureau of markets, and the hogs were purchased by the Hall Commission Co., of Moultrie. In nothing has Thomas county shown greater development than in the raising of fine hogs and, where once the old piney woods rooter was seen nosing around, his place has been taken by fine purebred stock.

Much of this change is due to the monthly hog sales that were inaugurated a little more than a year ago and that bring to the farmers more clear money, with less labor, than anything else on his farm, a condition that he is realizing more and try.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, March 15.—Cotton was a shade easier at the start, but firmed up in the late trading and recovered all list loss during the early session. Failure of frost to develop in the southwest, weak cables, pessimistic dry goods reports from Manchester and stagnant spots tended to encourage selling when the market opened. The market took what little selling that developed so well that pressure soon let up and values steadied. The late raily was attributed to the buying in this market by New York interests. Advices from southwest Texas, where considerable cotton has been planted, are of an optimistic nature. Temperatures did not fall low enough to endanger cotton that is up or just planted. Sentiment is largely bearish, but somehow the market seems to offer a remarkable resistance to bearish propaganda.

The second of the se what, in anticipation of a large crop this season. However, we have warned our friends before that the bearish situation may be overdiscounted and may be going too far, particularly as a radical change may occur at any time due to seasonal weather conditions. New crops continue in fairly good shape. Some noticeable changes today because of the unaettled weather over parts of the belt and the fact that some complaints are coming from various sections saying that the ground is to muddy for preparations. It is this kin of news that causes the market to become steady and resist any selling that might appear. However, if ideal conditions prevail for preparation, the market may probably go off again. Temporarily, however, there is no particular news that is not already discounted that will cause the market to fluctuate materially the next day or so. Total sales $10,334,000 against $5,532,000 previous day, $10,837,000 a week ago, $13,-334,000 a year ago and $12,023,000 two years

New York, March 15.—The stock market today was highly professional. Transactions represented little but a matching of wits between various so-called traders and cliques on the floor of the exchange. Prices swung back and forth as one or the other of those aggregations predominated. At the end the bullish element was in the ascendancy. In the belief that there remained a large amount of weak holdings in certain-specialties, which had been the first to yield in the break of two weeks ago, bears renewed attacks on these issues in the hope of further unsettling the general list.

New York, March 15.—0 Saturday the last ginning report of the season will be published and figures are expected to slightly exceed 16,000,000. Not a bale gathered using recars pickings, however, can possibly be high grade. Therefore, any increase in the number of hales means only addition to the quantity of unsaleable cottents in the state of the

COMER HOWELL & CO.

The main body of stocks opened lower in Monday's session but rebounded readily under the impetus of short covering and strength in the oils, which so far have given a remarkably good account of themselves, justifying our recommendations. It would not be at all surprising to see the good issues work to higher levels, despite developments in the remainder of the list, and we would therefore continue a constructive position.

we would therefore continue a constructive position.

Alternate railies and declines featured the trading with several attempts on the part of the bearish element to start a general decline again using stocks such as Coca-Cola. Seaboard Air Line. Atlantic Coast: Line and Foundation. as a means but the movement proved to be ill-timed, as figuidation did not follow and the market closed strong.

A continuation of the tactics employed Monday may be expected to continue affording excellent trading opportunities, but we anticipate the long range movement in the industrial stocks to be such that the greatest profits will be shown to those who sell on the bulges rather than to those who buy on dips.

PYNCHON & CO.

New York, March 15.—Enthusiasm not infrequently encourages an extreme viewpoint, which, in turn, prompts toe great confidence in one's position and results in procedure which may be proven later to have been quite unjustified. In considering cotton's value recently enthusiasm over a bearish stand has not been entirely lacking, with resultant confidence in materially lower values threatening at least to force prices to a level which may prove unwarranted, should anticipated developments not materialise. So far as the new crop is concerned, it is at present but a prospect with even acreage cally a promise and the ultimate harvest but a very uncertainty possibility; To consider it even a probability might appear unvarranted, for in its great uncertainty it seems hardly more than something which may be. Acreage can be contracted by inclement weather this spring, and actual planting may be made but a waste of energy by later developments. We would hardly encourage a fundamentally bullish stand at the moment, but in placing short lines from time to time could not remain unmindful of a very possible change in sentiment, for present values undoubtedly discount favorable conditions that may or perhaps may not develop.

Cotton Letters. FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, March 15.—Our market opened lower on the extreme in Liverpool, but failed to meet liquidation, and on declines developed decidedly broad buying power, finally rallying on strong eastern commission house buying with the close ic to lie lower than Saturday, with the weakness in July. Foreign weakness was pronounced. Liverpool closing 3jc to 4c lower. Broomhall accounted for the decline as due to the disagreement in the world court. Underlying conditions remain just as strong as ever, in our opinion, with the cash property scarce and stocks diminishing rapidly.

Scarce and stocks diministing reputation.

JNO. F. CLARK & CO.

Chicago, March 15.—Some private cables attribute decline in Liverpool to European political conditions. Broomhall states that the market is weak because of a consistently poor demand. Inasmuch as Buenos Aires has been weak also, it would seem that the absence of demand is the proper explanation. Little, if anything, done in an export way, which is natural, in view of the sharp decline in foreign markets. Assuming that the United States has sufficient supplies for home requirements, and this is generally conceded, it is difficult to understand why an ordinary consumptive demand should be a reason for higher prices.

New York, March 15.—Erratic fluctuations in stock prices today were accompanied by marked uneasiness over the Beigian financial situation. occasioned by a precipitate drop of almost half a cent in the franc and reports that loan negotiations in London had struck a snag, caused scatterered selling of Belgian bonds, but the declines were limited to a point or expected to interfere seriously with arrangements for a new international loan, although it may delay discussions.

Railroad obligations followed the selling in both markets. Seaboard Air arrangements for a new international loan, although it may delay discussions.

May finished at 78 1-8 to 78 1-4c, and July at 81 3-8 to 81 1-4. Oats were 1-8@1-4c lower with Mas 40 3-8 @40 1-2c and July 41 1-4. Rye lost 2@2 1-8c with May 90 1-4c and July 91 1-4c at the last.

Weakness in Liverpool and Buenos Ayres was responsible for the early selling and decline in wheat here, but the liquidation expected in May failed to materialize. Local bulls and holders of bids were good buyers on the decline and quickly tightened up the nearby delivery while the new crop months were heavy, the May-July spread widening to nearly 23c at the last, against 22c at the finish on Sat-urday. Reports that the Canadian pool had sold 2,000,000 bushels wheat for export overnight was not reflect-ed in the action of the Winnipeg mar-ket which closed 1 5-8c lower.

Poor Management

MANY a flourishing business enterprise has earned large profits for a number of years, only to suffer serious losses through unwise changes in policies or management. Well planned, aggressive leadership sometimes gives place to either reckless expansion or hidebound conservatism, both of which are equally fatal to success.

The whipping took place in Miss Lloyd's East Side apartment and the sequel in Harlem court Monday, when Betty pleaded so ardenly that her assailant, William C. May, 23, son of a wealthy Philadelphian, was let off with a suspended sentence.

The whipping took place in Miss under this place. Her screams caused neighbors to summon a policeman, and May's arrest followed. It was with difficulty that he was persuaded to go to jail without the dog.

In court Monday Betty interceded for her fiance.

"If I let him go what will you do with him?" asked Magistrate Goodman.

Miss Lloyd said May visited her in man.

2 Mail Pouches

Hartselle, Ala., March 15 .- (A)-The discovery that one or two mail pouches, placed in the Louisville and Nashville depot for the early southbound train, were missing, injected a new angle tonight into the investigation by officers of the robbery of the Bank of Hartselle early today.

The robbery, staged in wild west thriller fashion, netted several unmasked bandits between $15,000 and $20,000, which was taken from the safe of the bank efter several charges. safe of the bank after several charges of nitroglycerine had been set off. Be-fore robbing the bank the men enlistof nitrogreerine had been 820 off. Before robbing the bank the men enlisted the aid of Ernest Mitweede, vice president of the Farmers and Merchants' bank, in a search for gasoline, in which they bound up and held the bank official. Leslie Williams, the town religement and two pages they

District and appellate courts previously denied Chapman's appeal for a writ of habeas corpus to take him back to Atlanta, but his execution has been thrice postponed since he was sentenced April 4, 1925.

"There are several steps yet to, be taken," Joseph M. Freedman, one of the bandit's associate counsel, maintained at Hartford after learning of the supreme court's decision.

Station Agent Captured.

Station Agent Brad Huey was added to the bandits' captives when he emerged from the depot to look for mail from the northbound train. O. K. Williams, of Birmingham, who was awaiting the arrival of the Birmingham train at the station, was awaiting the arrival of the Birmingham train at the station, was of the bandits' associate counsel, maintained at Hartford after learning of the supreme court's decision.

"There are several steps yet to be taken," Joseph M. Freedman, one of the bandits' a sasociate counsel, minimal train at the station, was a last creard from the bandits' associate counsel, minimal train at the station, was also taken in two by the bandits associate counsel, minimal train at the station, was also taken in two by the bandits associate counsel, minimal train at the station, was also taken in two by the bandits and to individual the best of the superme court."

And a last creard, we can apply for a writ of late the board of pardons. Previous that we can apply for a writ of late the board of pardons of the powers of the federal government to transfer a prisoner from state to state, and to individual states, and the question of commutation of sentence, were not passed upon by the United States supreme court."

The slin, pale, almost ascetic criminal who once was styled the "superbandit" probably will continue to the leventh hour his efforts to wrigate free from the impending noose. The first panel is the bandits in gaining access to the bandits. Silencing Dr. Johnson and the day of a mail truck in New York on October 24, 1921, and made away with registered min New York on October 24, 1921, and made away with registered min younders containing money, securities and jewels having a negotiable value of more than $1,000,000. About the only temporal punishment possible for Chapman in the days when the heading called him the "Prince of Bandits".

Much of the glamor that surrounded Chapman in the days when the heading called him the "Prince of Bandits" has been first panel and the state of the panel and the

The Birmingham train pulled into rears, and the undoubtedly bad influence of Chapman on the youngsters of the nation will have reached an end. His hanging may lead to one last dramatic gesture. It might be better all around if he could be silently eliminated from further participation in the activities of the world which accorded him such notoriety.

The Birmingham train pulled into athletic commission as outstanding welterweight challengers since the decline of Tommy Milligan, of Scotland, In Nashville railroad authorities in Birmingham, upon being acquainted with what was going on in Hartselle in a report from Conductor J. A. Taylor, in charge of the train, ordered the train's departure to a contract requiring him to fight Mickey Walker for the world's 147-pound crown in the event he defears be expedited from the danger zone. Conductor Taylor spread the alarmill along the line and when deputies urrived on the scene 30 minutes later from Cullman, Ala., they found the mains of the bank building and heard in authentic story of wild west bank robbing.

1700 EPWORTH LEAGUE DELEGATES IN SESSION

Epworth league workers representing 54 Atlanta chapters, with more than 700 delegates, gathered at Wesley Memorial church Monday night in the opening session of a five-day efficiency institute, under auspices of the Atlanta Epworth League union.

Rev. Ralph Nollner, of Nashville, Tenn., who has conducted administration and spiritual work in all of the southern states, was principal speaker at the opening session. He will have charge of that phase of the work during the remaining four days.

ing the remaining four days. Giving in to the public's demand for a glimpse of the man who stood the whole town on its head for seven days the authorities put Carter in a bull pen outside the courtroom so that the curious crowd could look him over.

John N. Baldwin, assigned by the court to defend the sniper, says Carter is suffering from schizophenia, that he shows signs of having a dual personality and that he is a paranoiac. Carter, however, insists that he is perfectly sane and laughs at the alienists who examine him. He admits killing Dr. A. D. Searls and William McDevitt, the two murders for which he is on trial. He wants to be executed.

The state refused to accept his plea of guilty because unless convicted by a jury he could not be sentenced to death. County Prosecutor Beal is demanding the death penalty.

The jury was completed late Monday and the taking of testimony was scheduled to begin Tuesday morning.
